WHEELING, MAY 15, 1895.

The President on Silver.
Instead of abusing the President, as some Democrats are doing, for trying to save his party from the free silver folly, Democrats interested in their party's success should praise the President and do what they can to help him along in the good work. The President sees, what should be apparent to every observant and thinking man, that no party can succeed on the free silver issue.

Probably the Democratic party cannot succeed at all in 1896, but the President would like it to go into the campaign with as much show as possible. On a free silver platform it would not have a ghost of a show, unless the Republican party were on the same sort of platform, of which there is not even a remote probability.

The Populist party stands logically on a free silver platform. Any other party taking up with theism would be a base imitator and would be defeated for its pains. The Populist party cannot win with free silver, but there is no little of that party that defeat will mean nothing in particular to it.

The President sees that his party has already gone too far as a bob to the Populist kite, and he has sounded the anti-free silver note in a noble effort to cut it loose.

And yesterday it snowed. Perhaps we shall have some more climate before we get through with it all.

Pittsburgh District Miners' Strike.
It is believed that to-day will bring the end of the coal miners' strike in the Pittsburgh district. It is to be hoped that this may prove true and that the ending of the strike may bring with it living wages for the miners, who struck against wages below the standard of a decent living.

The operators have insisted that they were paying all that the condition of their trade would allow, which may be true, for what with dull business and the throat-cutting between regions and operators, it was hard to tell when and where bottom would be reached.

It may be hard to get at it, but certainly it is possible to come to an understanding by which the coal of all the districts will be sold at a price that will allow operators and miners to live. Coal that cannot be so mined would better be allowed to remain in the ground until conditions change.

The President is said to regard the whole income tax law as constitutional. The President is not the supreme court and not much of a lawyer.

Retired Military Officers.
The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, speaking of Admiral Meade's public criticism of the administration, says: "He made a mistake in not waiting a few days until he had been retired, when he could not have been court-martialed for it."

This is not our understanding of the status of a retired officer of the army or the navy. As we understand the regulations a retired officer is still an officer, though not on the active list. He remains subordinate to his superiors and must treat them with the same evidences and respect.

If a retired officer were to indulge in criticism of the President that would make an active officer liable to court martial certainly the fact of his retirement would not save him. Unless we are very much mistaken the Commercial Gazette is in error.

Headsman who remain out late these nights should remember that there is danger of being frost-bitten.

Good for the Episcopians.

Good news comes from Morgantown telling of the purchase of real estate by the Episcopians of this diocese for the purpose of erecting dormitories for the use of students of their denomination attending the university.

This provision will be helpful to the young men for whom it is intended and will extend the university's sphere of usefulness. The young men will be comfortably housed and under moral influence equal to the best. The Episcopians are by no means the most numerous denomination in West Virginia, but in this matter they are the first to take a step which commends itself to the thoughtful consideration of all denominations.

The university cannot be denominational, but it can be helped on in its work by the combined effort of all the denominations and of all the people. The Methodists, Presbyterians and Baptists are strong enough to follow the good lead of the Episcopians and erect dormitories for students of their respective denominations. Together they would be a tower of strength to the university.

The people of West Virginia can make the university a great power for good, and since it has been determined that its governing board shall no longer represent a single political party they are manifesting a new and marked interest in its welfare. The coming year promises to be the best in the history of the institution.

Free trade and free coinage of silver would be two very appropriate planks in the Democratic platform. Each means ruin.

Admiral Meade and the Administration.

Every true American will approve the robust American sentiments expressed by Admiral Meade. This distinguished officer of the navy is disgusted with the wishy-washy policy of the administration, which seems to be utterly without backbone in any international matter touching our interests.

The admiral, however, has made a blunder in making public criticism of the President. The President is the commander-in-chief of the army and navy and as much the admiral's superior officer as the admiral is the superior officer of everybody in his fleet. This relative status is fixed and cannot be changed by any conditions of the moment.

The admiral made a serious mistake to go before the public in criticism of the official acts of the President, and distinguished an officer as he is, if he be disciplined for what he has said every thoughtful citizen will be bound to side with the President.

The discipline of our military service must include the high as well as the low. There can be no discrimination.

It has entered the Canadian mind to imagine so vain a thing as that Great Britain can prevent the cutting of a canal between the great lakes and the Ohio river. This administration might agree with the Canadians on this point, but the people of this country never will. As soon as the money is ready the work on that canal will begin, and if Great Britain understands the situation she will saw wood.

Judge Barrett, of New York, says he wants for jurors men who read newspapers, who think and are capable of forming an intelligent opinion—just about the qualifications which until recently, when judges themselves began to be enlightened, drove men out of the jury box. It is gratifying to know that a man does not have to be a blockhead to be eligible to jury duty.

It cost a Maine lumberman $10,000 to discover that the wicked mind of man has devised such a swindle as the "gold" brick. The little souvenir of this discovery is worth $3. It is beyond belief that men who read the newspapers can be caught with so poor a bait, but they can be caught and are caught. They have been landed right here on the eastern bank of the Ohio.

Since the Wilson tariff went into effect wool in this country has reached the lowest price on record. If any free trader denies this slap him in the face with the record.

Since the Wilson tariff went into effect shoddy importations have broken the record. If any free trader denies this bang him over the head with a bale of shoddy.

A New Jersey judge sentenced a man to five days in jail for drunkenness and thirty days for smoking a cigarette in the court room. Cigarette smoking may not be six times as bad as drunkenness, but it was a righteous sentence just the same.

This week promises to bring 15,000 immigrants to New York. We don't need them, having enough of our own to find employment for at living wages. What we do need is a law to hold them back.

Governor ALGER is a free silverite and a landlord. His leases read: "Payable in standard gold of the United States." Those free silver "fans" are not asleep every minute of every twenty-four hours.

If the administration had had spies present among army and navy men in their clubs to eavesdrop what they might say against its policies, the administration has been in very small business.

Prices are advancing the world over. Will the Wilson bill flounder—or shall we say "fans"—claim that they did it all?

Out at Philippi.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

PHILIPPI, W. VA., May 14.—The people of the quiet town of Philippi are greatly exercised over the appearance of oil running out of a well, which was bored about two years ago, but later was abandoned, because it was thought it would produce no oil. A few weeks ago it was noticed that oil was oozing out through the plugged well at the rate of a barrel a day, and of a quality which is said to be the best. The Tygart's Valley Mineral and Oil Company, who drove these wells, subsequently left them and now, since the oil has made its appearance, a company composed of three energetic men, V. W. Kittle, W. P. Scott and Sam T. Holt, have leased the land in and around Philippi and are negotiating to have the plug taken out and the wells cleaned, to bore deeper and have the wells struck. This can be done with little trouble and cost, as the wells are each over two thousand feet deep. Quite a number of oil speculators are already visiting the town in view of the oil craze, and it is thought the wells will become good producers when opened up.

SHODDY REPLACES WOOL.

Prosperity Visions of Democratic Free Traders Clouded by Facts—Importations of Shoddy Increased More than a Thousand Per Cent and the American Wool Grower Sees the Price of His Product Going Down—Treasury Figures That Tell The Story.

Washington Staff Correspondent in Philadelphia Press.

Senator Voorhees, of Indiana, asserted in the tariff debate in Congress, and also on the stump in Indiana, that if he thought wool would decrease in price he would never vote for the Wilson tariff bill. He declared, as did all the other free traders, that if wool were put on the free list it would increase in value because of the greater demand that would be created for American wools to mix with those of foreign production. That this was a barfaced misstatement was demonstrated frequently in The Press and was patent to any fair-minded person. The free traders did not expect wool to increase in value, because if they did woolen cloths would be dearer, instead of cheaper. It was a falsehood similar to that uttered by many demagogues now in advocating free silver coinage.

The new tariff law has been in effect long enough to test the truth of those free trade assertions about wool. It largely decreased in price soon after the Cleveland administration came into power, because it was then clear that wool would be put on the free list. But it has kept right on going down, notwithstanding the low price reached before the tariff bill became a law. Ohio fleece, X and XX, according to the figures of the treasury bureau of statistics, sold for 22 cents a pound in the first week of May of last year. They are now selling for 16 cents, and even less, per pound. When the new tariff act was passed the price was 21 cents, and now it is 16, showing a decline of 5 cents a pound in eight months under the new law. But no one will ever hear of any explanation of this point from the free traders. Voorhees will carefully avoid any reference to his campaign assertions on the subject of wool, just as he would as carefully avoid, in the future, any reference to his present statements on the subject of free silver coinage if the country should be so unfortunate as to have such a calamitous statute inflicted on it.

THE REIGN OF SHODDY.

Another thing in connection with the wool tariff will be kept from publicity as much as possible by the men who passed the existing law on the subject. The cry was sent up all over the country that putting wool on the free list would give the people better clothing and stop the use of "shoddy." The Treasury statistics give an interesting lesson on that subject. Under the McKinley act only 1,504 pounds of shoddy and waste were imported in March of last year. In the same month this year 73,115,660 pounds were imported, showing a gain of 147.69 per cent in the importations of shoddy and waste under the new law. For the nine months ending March 21, in 1894, the importations were 73,923 pounds, while for the eight months ending at the same time under the new law the importations were 9,713,187 pounds. That is the way the new law is keeping out shoddy—that is, by increasing its importation 147.69 per cent. Such importations of shoddy were never before known in the history of the country. That is the way free wool and "tariff reform" give the American people better and cheaper clothing. And even by the use of this shoddy, and with free wool, the manufacturers are unable to compete with those of England. The importations of woolen goods increased from $1,238,307 in March of last year, to $1,320,110 in the same month this year, another enormous percentage of increase. A large number of woolen mills are now shut down because of strikes, the manufacturers being unable to pay even the present reduced rate of wages.

It has been shown in these dispatches on numerous occasions that Great Britain uses more shoddy and other substitutes for wool than any other nation in the world. Germany is now trying to catch up with her in that respect. "The American Wool and Cotton Reporter, which was a free wool organ before the new tariff law took effect, said in a recent issue: "England is the home of shoddy goods, and unless it be Germany, there is no other country that can come within gunshot range of her." And the Manchester, England, correspondent of that trade journal has acknowledged that upward of 100,000,000 pounds of rags are annually imported and collected in Great Britain to be worked over into clothing. "Stop the supply of shoddy and mungo," declares this authority, "and more than one-half of the woolen mills in the kingdom would have to close."

FRUITS OF TARIFF REFORM.

The English consumption of pure wool was 6.9 pounds per capita in 1890, as compared with 9.23 pounds in the United States. The American people were getting better clothing before the gates were thrown open to this irruption of British shoddy than any other nation in the world. But the reign of shoddy has begun and it will continue as long as the Wilson tariff law is on the statute books. We are not only buying vast quantities of shoddy for use in this country, but we are also buying shoddy goods made abroad. The increase in the importations of woolen goods since the new tariff law took effect is over $10,000,000 in value. But as the woolen schedule did not take effect in all of its parts until January the importations for March may be taken as a safe guide. The increase for that month was $3,081,803 as compared with the same month in the previous year. That means at least $37,000,000 increase for the year in the importations of woolen manufactures.

Wool has gone down nearly one-half, the increase in shoddy importations running up to 147.69 per cent; an enormous increase in the importations of woolen goods. American farmers in nearly a bankrupt condition, and American workmen in woolen mills on a strike, are some of the fruits of tariff reform so far as we have gone.

BISHOP PETERKIN

Takes a Step in Connection With the State University that May Be Followed by the Heads of Other Denominations. Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., May 14.—Bishop George W. Peterkin, of the Episcopal diocese of West Virginia, has bought the property of Prof. John D. Harvor, in this place, for $5,000, and has made an offer for the property of Prof. R. C. Berkely adjoining it. Upon those dormitories will be erected to be used as homes for Episcopal students who attend the university. Bishop Peterkin has been contemplating this move for a number of years, and has several times made offers for property here, but until now has not succeeded in interesting the diocese in the move. The project is hailed with much satisfaction by the officers and friends of the institution here, because it will benefit the university in many ways. All students of Episcopal families will live in the dormitories, which will be in charge of the rector of the Episcopal church, but the plan is particularly designed for the use of the young men of the state who expect to enter the ministry of the Episcopal church. It is Bishop Peterkin's idea to have them come here, where the tuition is free, and take the course preparatory to entering the theological seminary. As the charge for their living will be nominal, it will be a big saving to the diocese, which educates a great many of the young men who enter the ministry of the church.

The bishop is confident he can have twenty-five students here next year to begin with. This is the first material evidence of denominational interest in the university, although such a project has been contemplated by the Presbyterian church, but always had to be abandoned on account of lack of funds. It is believed that since the Episcopians have taken the lead the Presbyterian and Methodist and perhaps other congregations will follow suit and the prospects will be bright for a largely increased attendance at the school.

I WISH YOU WELL, SWEETHEART.

I wish you well, my sweetheart—
The latest love will tell it so.
That love shall touch a heart of ice,
And set it all aglow.
But love to thee has cost my
For me wouldst I not impart.
And so I can but say "good-by—
I wish you well, sweetheart."

I wish you well, my sweetheart—
Why should I wish you part?
Because a sweet, wild hope I had
Was cherished all in vain?
Dear, dear you grew, I eyes so blue,
O'ert lips curved apart.
O soul so fair—but I may dare
To wish you well, sweetheart.

I wish you well, my sweetheart,
You are not more to blame
Than is the rose beyond my reach,
For love indeed came.
Kind time may love's fireling feel,
But love will not depart—
Ah, not I'll say till I am gray,
I wish you well, sweetheart.
